Global markets navigated a volatile October, buffeted by monetary easing, geopolitical tensions, and shifting investor sentiment. US equities extended their rally, with the S&P 500 and Nasdaq hitting record highs on the back of robust third-quarter earnings and unrelenting enthusiasm for artificial intelligence (AI) – even as valuations looked stretched. The Federal Reserve (Fed) delivered its second 25-basis-point rate cut of the year, aiming to cushion a slowing labour market amid a prolonged government shutdown. Treasury yields fell, resulting in a third straight month of gains for bonds. Emerging markets stole the spotlight, buoyed by a softer dollar and risk-on appetite. The MSCI EM Index jumped nearly 5%, marking its tenth consecutive monthly advance – the longest winning streak since 1993 – as investors chased higher returns beyond developed markets. Tech-heavy economies such as South Korea and Taiwan led gains, supported by AI-driven demand and expectations of further Fed easing. Goldman Sachs lifted its 12-month outlook for emerging market equities, citing resilient policy frameworks and improving earnings momentum. Bond markets enjoyed rare calm after months of turbulence. US Treasuries rallied on dovish Fed signals, while gilt and eurozone yields fell as inflation cooled and fiscal jitters eased. Japanese long-dated bonds strengthened amid receding political uncertainty. Credit spreads hovered near historic lows, underscoring investor confidence despite structural risks flagged by the IMF’s Global Financial Stability Report. Geopolitics added drama. US-China trade tensions flared after Washington imposed steep tariffs on Chinese goods, only to ease following a Trump-Xi meeting that secured concessions on rare earths and soybeans. Meanwhile, IMF World Bank meetings spotlighted debt sustainability and global fragmentation, reinforcing safe-haven flows into gold, which surged past $4,000 an ounce before retracing some of the move.
